

Angel Flight Central Ground Support Team (GST)

To our Angel Flight Central Ground Support Team,

Well, it's been awhile since I've been able to fly an Angel Flight mission. Near the end of June I was hit by a car while riding my bike, getting seriously injured ... and as a result I was grounded from flying for several weeks. I just got my wings back recently, and this is the first mission I've been able to fly since mid May. This is the 2nd mission I've flown in the DM Law airplane, which Mike D. generously offers up for AFC missions a few times each year. Our passenger today was returning from visiting a medical trial consultant in Nashville. He has been battling colon cancer for a few years, and now the current treatment has stopped working for him, so he's hoping to get enrolled in a one of three different trials that he learned about during his trip this week.

We were credited with 2 AFC missions on this trip, landing us at 217 total missions so far.

*Mission Date:
September 22, 2026.*

Our passengers wrote the following in our guest logbook:

"When my oncologist told me my best chance of survival would be a clinical trial in Nashville, I began to stress — how would I get out there and not break the bank? Then Karli Ritter told me about Angel Flight. THANK YOU for flying cancer patients like me out of town. You are literally a life saver! We appreciate you more than you'll ever know!"

Trip Details:

This trip started out as a simple Angel Flight mission, but we were able to help DM Law get a two-for-one benefit from the round trip to Nashville. When I told Mike that there was an AFC mission returning from Nashville, he realized he had a couple of employees he wanted to get out to Nashville around the same time. So ... we decided to make the trip part business and part charity.

I picked up two of the DM Law lawyers at KMKC around 8:00 a.m., after the short repositioning flight from KOJC. We flew out to KJWN (Nashville) at FL250 for the 90-minute flight. There were some storms building just west of Nashville, so we routed a little bit north around the system and stayed in clear skies all the way to the airport. There was a low-level cloud deck near the destination airport, however, which gave us a chance to fly an instrument approach to Runway 02.

The lawyers had a car service waiting for them at the airport, so they whisked away to their meetings while I spent some time at the FBO waiting for their return. We planned to have our AFC passengers arrive at the airport for the return flight at about the same time the lawyers were going to be finished with their lunch meetings.

The departure time from KJWN back to KMKC was set for 2:00 p.m., which left me enough time to borrow the crew car and head into downtown Nashville to the Ole Red restaurant for lunch and a little live music. 😊

Ahead of schedule, the AFC passengers and the DM Law folks arrived back at KJWN around 1:30 p.m., and we were wheels up by 1:50. Winds were strong at altitude, so I decided to fly home at FL200, hoping to save a little time compared with flying at FL260. The flight was still longer because of the typical seasonal winds—close to two hours enroute—but at least the conditions were clear and smooth.

We rolled up to KMKC to drop everyone off around 3:50 p.m., after which I repositioned the plane to KIXD, where it is normally hangered.

And here is where you come in. As part of our Ground Support Team, you have offered to provide a contribution to the Angel Flight Central organization each time we fly a mission. To donate to Angel Flight Central online, visit:
